Simplified Connector Selection Instructions

STEP 1 Determine the type (male or female) and size (3/8", 1/2", 3/4") of the adapter fitting that will be needed to connect to the gas supply piping. For example, if the gas supply piping has a 1/2" female iron pipe (FIP) thread at the shutoff valve, you will need a 1/2" male iron pipe (MIP) adapter fitting. If your gas supply piping does not have a convenient shutoff valve, we recommend that you install a valve when the connector is installed.

STEP 2 Determine the type and size of the adapter fitting that will be needed to connect to the appliance. Locate the point of connection (usually the regulator) or consult the appliance manual to determine this.

STEP 3 Determine how long the connector needs to be. Allow enough length so that the appliance can be moved if necessary for cleaning or service without stretching or twisting the connector. Do not use an excessively long connector, because unnecessary length reduces capacity and may make the connector more susceptible to crushing or kinking when the appliance is moved into position.

STEP 4 Determine the size of the connector (1/4" nominal ID, 3/8" nominal ID, 1/2" nominal ID) to meet the BTU/hr capacity requirement of the appliance. Check the appliance manual or nameplate for the maximum BTU/hr input rating. Using the BTU Capacities Chart, locate the connector size that will deliver the required capacity (or greater) at the length that was determined in Step 3.

STEP 5 Select the appropriate connector model for your application. With the information obtained in Steps 1 through 4, you can now select the proper size and length connector with the correct adapter fittings.

Simplified Connector Installation Instructions

STEP 1 Remove the adapter fittings from the connector. Notice that each fitting has a FLARE end and a tapered pipe thread end. (See diagram below.)

STEP 2 Install the adapter fittings into the gas supply piping and the appliance. The tapered pipe thread is the end that is used to connect the adapter fitting to the gas supply piping or the appliance. The FLARE end is designed to mate with the connector nut. Do not apply any type of thread sealant, lubricant, or grease to the FLARE end of the adapter fitting. Of course, thread sealant or teflon tape must be used on the tapered pipe end of the adapter fitting. Wrench tighten the fittings before attaching the connector. Do not use the connector nuts to wrench tighten the adapter fittings.

STEP 3 Attach the connector to the adapter fittings. The FLARE joint is intended to be a dry metal-to-metal seal. Wrench tighten the nuts onto the adapter fittings.

STEP 4 Leak test the installation. Turn on the gas and check for leaks with a liquid leak detector or a soapy water solution. Rinse all joints with water after the test, as some leak test solutions may cause corrosion. Do not leak test with matches or any other open flame or source of ignition. If a leak is found, turn off the gas before making any repairs. Repeat the leak test until no leaks are found.

STEP 5 Move appliance into final position, if necessary. Be careful not to damage the connector during this step. Do not bend the connector tighter than the diameter of a golf ball. Inspect the connector at least annually. Replace the connector at the first sign of any damage or corrosion. Do not reuse the connector or the adapter fittings on another appliance or on the same application in another location.

RIGHT STRAP MULTI-FUNCTIONAL PIPE CLAMP

When installed in half clamp fashion, RightStrap provides a "silence gap" between tubing and framing . . . thus reducing the noise generated when water supply tubing expands and rubs against wood with other half clamps.

Reversing the removable barbed nail allows RightStrap to be mounted at predesignated positions so tubing may be "popped-in" afterward.

RightStrap's perpendicular nail channel allows "cradle mounting" capability like a mini J-Hook installation. Tubing may be "popped-in" afterward, also.

FIRE-RESISTANT PANELS

The overriding goal of all fire-resistant assembly design is to mitigate risk in the event of a fire. Therefore, it's imperative to match products and systems to the end performance desired. Having an understanding of proper product applications and the latest technologies can avoid costly job rework and delays, as well as minimize any safety risks.

When it comes to fire, USG established most of the fire testing procedures currently used by Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL). USG is the undisputed leader among building material manufacturers in providing products and systems designed to keep occupants safe from fire.

MOLD-RESISTANT PANELS

When it comes to residential and commercial construction, performance of the materials should be taken into consideration when deciding which product is the right option. When risk of moisture exposure is present, choose products and systems that offer adequate resistance. When moisture is limited during the construction phase, mold-resistant products act as extra protection against mold growth when incidental moisture is present. All USG moisture- and mold-resistant products have been tested to ASTM D3273, Standard Test Method for Resistance to Growth of Mold on the Surface of Interior Coatings in an Environmental Chamber<sup>3</sup>, the gypsum industry's standard test for mold resistance.

- MOISTURE AND MOLD RESISTANCE: Panel scores are representative of independent lab tests at the time of manufacture per ASTM D3273, Standard Test Method for Resistance to Growth of Mold on the Surface of Interior Coatings in an Environmental Chamber.

This ASTM lab test may not accurately represent the mold performance of building materials in actual use. Given unsuitable project conditions during storage, installation or after completion, any building material can be overwhelmed by mold. To manage the growth of mold, the best and most cost-effective strategy is to protect building products from water exposure during storage and installation and after completion of the building. This can be accomplished by using good design and construction practices.

ABUSE-RESISTANT PANELS

All commercial and institutional buildings have high-traffic areas where many people and objects pass through. Inherently, these areas are more prone to scraping and bumping, and therefore, damage. If the materials used aren't more durable than others more suitable for normal use, the condition of the walls quickly erodes. If not properly maintained, they quickly become unsightly. Worse yet, building owners may be faced with underperforming surfaces, increased maintenance costs and potential safety issues. But before selecting materials for your project, be sure to check with your local building code authority. Many municipalities are now adopting International Building Code® (IBC®) standards that require greater levels of abuse resistance in a number of critical areas (such as exit and elevator hoistway enclosures), which ensures the safety of the property and its occupants.

USG can help you address key performance issues with our comprehensive portfolio of abuse-resistant solutions that have been tested in accordance with UL and ASTM C1629, Standard Classification for Abuse-Resistant Non-Decorated Interior Gypsum Panel Products and Fiber-Reinforced Cement Panels. When specified and installed in accordance with best practices, our products can improve the total performance of the building components, keeping the structure and its occupants safer.

- MOISTURE AND MOLD RESISTANCE: Panel scores are representative of independent lab tests at the time of manufacture per ASTM D3273, Standard Test Method for Resistance to Growth of Mold on the Surface of Interior Coatings in an Environmental Chamber.
This ASTM lab test may not accurately represent the mold performance of building materials in actual use. Given unsuitable project conditions during storage, installation or after completion, any building material can be overwhelmed by mold. To manage the growth of mold, the best and most cost-effective strategy is to protect building products from water exposure during storage and installation and after completion of the building. This can be accomplished by using good design and construction practices.

LINER PANELS

Walls that enclose elevator shafts, stairwells and other vertical shafts are the lifeline of a structure. Should a fire occur, firefighters control the use of elevators, leaving stairwells as the only means for occupant egress or rescue within a building. Since these walls are an important component, they must have the strength to withstand lateral loads and provide needed fire protection. High-performing USG Sheetrock® Brand liner panels are tested and exceed even the most stringent standards, ensuring the safety of the property and its occupants.
